

178b.1 Exercise

Fill in the blank with the correct relative pronoun (ὃς, ἣ, ὅ, who, which, etc.).

You will need to know the genitive and gender of these nouns: μάντις, νοῦσος, and κῆλον.

μάντις

1. I loved the seer whose prophecies helped us.
2. He is the seer whom Agamemnon dishonored
3. They knew the seer whom Agamenon did not please.
4. You saw the seer whose staff is golden.
5. We called for seers who could tell us the future.
6. He is the seer for whom we burned sacrifices.

νοῦσος

1. He experienced the plague of which impiety is the cause.
2. Terrible is the plague which he sent through the camp.
3. They contracted the plague for which there is no help.
4. Terrible are the plagues which gods sent to mortals.
5. You know of the plague of which this is the first symptom
6. Gods send many plagues, which are destructive

κῆλον

1. The arrows of the gods, which struck the mules first, were very accurate.
2. This arrow, for which I have a sharp arrowhead, was broken.
3. The arrow, whose tip is sharp, is deadly.
4. I dodged that arrow, which Apollo sent forth.
5. We dodged these arrows, which Apollo kept shooting.
6. These are the broken arrows, for which I found new arrowheads.
7. The arrows, whose quiver was covered on both ends, shrieked.