

8.1 KEY

- 1) The kings have many golden scepters. (kings = nominative [subject] ; scepters = accusative [direct object])
- 2) The Achaeans prepared evil death for the Trojans. (Achaean = nominative [subject])
- 3) The prophet spoke many evil words to the Argives. (prophet = nominative [subject]; words = accusative [direct object])
- 4) The prophet spoke many evil words to the Argives. (to the Argives = dative [to/for someone or something])
- 5) Klytemnestra created many plans for Agamemnon. (Klytemnestra = nominative [subject]; plans = accusative [direct object])
- 7) The plans of Klytemnestra were evil. (of Klytemnestra = genitive [possession])
- 8) On the walls of Troy Helen saw Menelaus. (of Troy = genitive [possession]; Menelaus = accusative [direct object])
- 10) The priest brought countless ransom for Agamemnon. (priest= nominative [subject]; ransom = accusative [direct object])
- 11) The priest's gifts were countless. (gifts = nominative [subject]; countless = nominative [predicate adjective])
- 12) The priest's gifts were countless. (priest's = genitive [possession])
- 13) Because the gods have Olympian homes, the Achaean honor them (gods = nominative [subject]; them= accusative [direct object])
- 15) Achilles spoke thus and sat down. (Achilles = nominative [subject])